- Proceed along the pathway until you come to the next road crossing and you will be facing the Wagner Well House.
- Continue along the pathway on the north side of the road and you will see a historical marker for the Curry House, and soon after you will come to Gordon Lane on your left and the Gordon House historical marker.
- From here, retrace your steps back to the Springridge SMART stop.

Note:

Also, if you drive or are on a bike, you can also visit the Union Hill School building inside the St. Francis Church property, just across Miley Road, to the southwest of the walk. Note: There are no sidewalks on Miley Road to get you there!

The Wagner Well House, dating from 1926, contains a 43-foot-deep well.

The Ice Age Boulders in this area were part of the rubble carried into the Willamette Valley during the Missoula Floods, one of the most violent events in Oregon's geologic history. The floods were triggered by the advance and retreat of continental glaciers about 15,000 to 13,000 years ago.

This site was home to the Curry House, built in 1853 and torn down in 1950. George Law Curry became Oregon's first Territorial Governor and was in office when Oregon was admitted to statehood in 1859. His wife Chloe was the great granddaughter of legendary frontiersman Daniel Boone.

This site was home to the Gordon House, the only building in Oregon designed by Frank Lloyd Wright, heralded as one of the greatest architects of the 20th century. After the Gordon's death, the house was saved from demolition in 2001 when the home was moved to The Oregon Garden in Silverton, Oregon.
